Beatrice Lane Suzuki : Buddhist Temples of Kyoto and Kamakura (Eastern Buddhist Voices) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Buddhist Temples of Kyoto and Kamakura (Eastern Buddhist Voices):

Beatrice Lane Suzuki (1878-1939) was an extremely well informed and sensitive expositor of Mahayana Buddhism. As the American wife of the influential Zen Buddhist Suzuki Daisetsu, she lived in Japan for many years, becoming very familiar with the leading temples of various Buddhist schools especially in Ky to and Kamakura. Buddhist Temples of Ky to and Kamakura brings together some of her writings from The Eastern Buddhist. The collection preserves valuable information from Suzuki s own times and the charm of her personal discovery of the temples described here. Further information is also provided to place them in their current context. The volume will be of interest to scholars of Japanese Buddhism and to the many travelers to these sites today.

"In this book it is a pleasure to learn about famous temples like Kiyomizudera, Ginkakuji, Engakuji, Mount Koya and others. But it's useful in the classroom as well. Her essays remain invaluable for giving students a first-hand view of the architectural, religious, and literary riches tied to these famous Buddhist temples." --Mark MacWilliams, St. Lawrence University, Religious Studies Vol. 43(1)About the AuthorBeatrice Lane Suzuki (1878-1939) was a very well informed and sensitive expositor of Mahayana Buddhism and the American wife of the well-known Zen Buddhist Suzuki Daisetsu. She lived in Japan for many years and came to know the leading temple centres of various Buddhist schools - especially in Ky to and Kamakura - very well.
