

[Read now] Burying the Past: Making Peace and Doing Justice After Civil Conflict

Burying the Past: Making Peace and Doing Justice After Civil Conflict

From Brand: Georgetown University Press
Download PDF | ePub | DOC | audiobook | ebooks*

 Download

 Read Online

#2899881 in Books Georgetown University Press 2003-05-27 Original language: English PDF # 1 9.02 x .82 x 5.981, 1.08 #File Name: 0878403949368 pages | File size: 57.Mb

From Brand: Georgetown University Press : Burying the Past: Making Peace and Doing Justice After Civil Conflict before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Burying the Past: Making Peace and Doing Justice After Civil Conflict:

5 of 5 people found the following review helpful. A highly recommended compendium of essays By Midwest Book Review Burying The Past: Making Peace And Dong Justice After Civil Conflict is a highly recommended compendium of essays drawn together by Nigel Biggar (Professor of Theology at the University of Leeds) and focusing the problems of establishing democracy after a transition from brutal, oppressive regimes -- and often violent civil, prolonged conflict. The problem is to reconcile the populace so that reprisals and revenge does not undermine or subvert the newly establishing democratic principles, procedures, and compromises. Very highly recommended reading for students of political science and international studies, here are to be found outstanding contributions by Donald Shriver, Jean Bethke Elshtain, Tuomas Forsberg, Martha Minow, Hugo van der Merwe, Marie Smyth, Brandon Hamber, Alexandra Barahona de Brito, Rachel Seider, Charles Villa-Vicencio, Stef Vandeginste, Terence McCaughey, and Nigel Biggar.

No one can deny how September 11, 2001, has altered our understandings of "Peace" and "Justice" and "Civil Conflict." Those have become words with startling new life in our vocabularies. Yet "making" peace and "doing" justice must remain challenges that are among the highest callings of humanity especially in a terror-heightened world. Nigel Biggar, Christian ethicist and editor of this now more than ever "must read" (Choice) volume, newly expanded and updated, addresses head-on the concept of a redemptive burying of the past, urging that the events of that infamous date be approached as a transnational model of conflict-and suggesting, wisely and calmly, that justice can be even the better understood if we should undertake the very important task of locating the sources of hostility, valid or not, toward the West. Burying the Past asks these important questions: How do newly democratic nations put to rest the conflicts of the past? Is granting forgiveness a politically viable choice for those in power? Should justice be restorative or retributive? Beginning with a conceptual approach to justice and forgiveness and moving to an examination of reconciliation on the political and on the psychological level, the collection examines the quality of peace as it has been forged in the civil conflicts in Rwanda, South Africa, Chile, Guatemala and Northern Ireland. There are times in history when "making peace" and "doing justice" seem almost impossible in the face of horrendous events. Those responses are understandably human. But it is in times just like these when humanity can and must rise to its possibilities and to its higher purposes in order to continue considering itself just and humane.

"A thoroughly researched, stimulating, and unequalled work that is ideal for case methodology instruction--a "must read" for graduate students, researchers, faculty, and professionals/practitioners." "Well-written, timely and genuinely breaking new ground...." "A thoroughly researched, stimulating, and unequalled work that is ideal for case methodology instruction -- a 'must read' for graduate students, researchers, faculty, and professionals/practitioners." -- "Choice," reviewing a previous edition or volume "Well-written, timely and genuinely breaking new ground." -- "Religious Studies," reviewing a previous edition or volume "[A] fascinating collection of essays." -- "Journal of Peace Research," reviewing a previous edition or volume About the Author Nigel Biggar is professor of theology at the University of Leeds, where he directs the Institute for the Advanced Study of Religion, Ethics, and Public Life. His previous books include Good Life: Reflections on What We Value Today and Theological Politics: A Critique of "Faith in the City."