Checkpoint, Temple, Church and Mosque: A Collaborative Ethnography of War and Peace (Anthropology, Culture and Society)

before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Checkpoint, Temple, Church and Mosque: A Collaborative Ethnography of War and Peace (Anthropology, Culture and Society):

Written by some great scholars one of whom was my teacher at Peradeniya, it is concise and engaging. It gives a good picture about the Sri Lankan civil war from an ethnographic perspective. I highly recommend it for personal reading as well as for serious academic work.

The substantive contributions of this book to our understanding of the intertwined life of war and peace are unparalleled and what is even more remarkable is their mode of thinking that privileges co-operative modes of work. An inspiring and deeply moving book' -- Veena Das, Krieger-Eisenhower Professor of Anthropology, Johns Hopkins University 'Draws together an extraordinarily rich body of ethnographic research in Sri Lanka that challenges conventional wisdoms about religion and conflict. Exquisitely written and subtly argued this book is essential reading for practitioners and researchers engaged in the fields of development, conflict and religion' -- Jude Howell, Professor of International Development, London School of Economics About the Author Jonathan Spencer is Regius Professor of South Asian Language, Culture and Society at the University of Edinburgh.
