From Rawat Publications : Communal Violence and Minorities: Gujarat Society in Ferment before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Communal Violence and Minorities: Gujarat Society in Ferment:

"The 2002 Gujarat riots witnessed the rise of a spate of writings on related issues in India as well as abroad. The present volume, though deals with the same subject, adds some newer dimensions to its understanding. These include an analysis of the spread of these riots; contents, causes and nature of violence; actors and agencies perpetrating and facilitating its sustenance; response of tribals and dalits to these events; socio-political determinants of perpetuating as well as thwarting the effects of such riots and the cognitive construction of communal images among the rural population in Central Gujarat during the aftermath of these unprecedented riots in the State."

About the AuthorLancy Lobo is Director at the Centre for Culture and Development, Vadodara. Earlier, he had served as the Director, Centre for Social Studies, Surat. He has conducted extensive studies on the tribes, Dalits, OBCs and minorities in rural and urban Gujarat. He has authored six books and has contributed several articles to professional journals. His published works include "The Thakors of North Gujarat Poor in Urban India: Study of Surat Slums "(co-authored with Biswaroop Das) and "Communal Violence and Minorities: Gujarat Society in Ferment "(coedited with Biswaroop Das). He was an International Fellow at the Woodstock Centre, Georgetown University, Washington DC

(1999 2000) during which he worked on "Globalisation, Hindu Nationalism and Christians in India". At present, he is working on degradation of forests and its impact on the tribals of Gujarat.
