From The National Society for the Study of Ed : Constructivism in Education (National Society for the Study of Education Yearbooks) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Constructivism in Education (National Society for the Study of Education Yearbooks):

Constructivism in Education is a lively discussion of the varieties of constructivist thought which have been applied to the teaching of school subjects, especially science and mathematics. Contributors include philosophers of education and specialists in science, mathematics, and childhood education.
