

(Download free pdf) Paths of Accommodation: Muslim Societies and French Colonial Authorities in Senegal and Mauritania, 1880-1920 (Western African Studies)

Paths of Accommodation: Muslim Societies and French Colonial Authorities in Senegal and Mauritania, 1880-1920 (Western African Studies)

David Robinson

audiobook / *ebooks / Download PDF / ePub / DOC

Download

Read Online

#1292203 in Books Ohio University Press 2000-12-31 Original language: English PDF # 1 9.26 x .96 x 6.251, 1.46 #File Name: 0821413546377 pages | File size: 73.Mb

David Robinson : Paths of Accommodation: Muslim Societies and French Colonial Authorities in Senegal and Mauritania, 1880-1920 (Western African Studies) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Paths of Accommodation: Muslim Societies and French Colonial Authorities in

Senegal and Mauritania, 1880-1920 (Western African Studies):

0 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Great! By Mamadou Lamine Ndiaye I am totally satisfied. Everything is as expected. And I am enjoying it. I wish all my purchases be like this one. Best! 4 of 5 people found the following review helpful. Senegal Mauritania Muslim Societies 1880-1920 By William Garrison Jr. (From another's review): Between 1880 and 1920, Muslim Sufi orders became pillars of the colonial regimes and economies of Senegal and Mauritania. In this 361-page, 2000 paperback book, author David Robinson examines the ways in which the leaders of the orders negotiated relations with the Federation of French West Africa in order to preserve autonomy within the religious, social, and economic realms while abandoning the political sphere to their non-Muslim rulers. This was a striking development because the local inhabitants had a strong sense of belonging to the Dar al-Islam, the "world of Islam" in which Muslims ruled themselves. Drawing from a wide variety of archival, oral, and Arabic sources, Robinson describes the important roles played by Muslim merchants and the mulatto community of St. Louis, Senegal. He also examines the impact of the electoral institutions established by the Third Republic, and the French effort to develop a reputation as a "Muslim power"--a European imperial nation with a capacity for ruling over Islamic subjects. By charting the similarities and differences of the trajectories followed by leading groups within the region as they responded to the colonial regimes, Robinson provides an understanding of the relationship between knowledge and power, the concepts of civil society and hegemony, and the transferability of symbolic, economic, and social capital. Topics covered include: Part 1 - The Framework: Space, time, and structure. Part 2 - Bases of Accommodation: Sources, discourses, and mediators of knowledge; Conquest and colonial rule; France as a "Muslim Power"; Civil society: Saint-Louis in the French imperial sphere; The sons of Ndar: The Muslim merchants of Saint-Louis. Part 3 - Patterns of Accommodation; The obstacles to accommodation for the Umarians; Saad Buh and the Fadiliyya way; Sidiyya Baba: Co-architect of Colonial Mauritania; Malik Sy: Teacher in the New Colonial Order; Amadu Bamba: A complex path to accommodation.

Between 1880 and 1920, Muslim Sufi orders became pillars of the colonial regimes and economies of Senegal and Mauritania. In Paths of Accommodation, David Robinson examines the ways in which the leaders of the orders negotiated relations with the Federation of French West Africa in order to preserve autonomy within the religious, social, and economic realms while abandoning the political sphere to their non-Muslim rulers. This was a striking development because the local inhabitants had a strong sense of belonging to the Dar al-Islam, the world of Islam in which Muslims ruled themselves. Drawing from a wide variety of archival, oral, and Arabic sources, Robinson describes the important roles played by Muslim merchants and the mulatto community of St. Louis, Senegal. He also examines the impact of the electoral institutions established by the Third Republic, and the French effort to develop a reputation as a Muslim power a European imperial nation with a capacity for ruling over Islamic subjects. By charting the similarities and differences of the trajectories followed by leading groups within the region as they responded to the colonial regimes, Robinson provides an understanding of the relationship between knowledge and power, the concepts of civil society and hegemony, and the transferability of symbolic, economic, and social capital.

About the Author David Robinson is a University Distinguished Professor of History and African Studies at Michigan State University. and the author of several studies in francophone and Islamic West Africa.