Parna Sengupta : Pedagogy for Religion: Missionary Education and the Fashioning of Hindus and Muslims in Bengal before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Pedagogy for Religion: Missionary Education and the Fashioning of Hindus and Muslims in Bengal:

Offering a new approach to the study of religion and empire, this innovative book challenges a widespread myth of modernity that Western rule has had a secularizing effect on the non-West by looking closely at missionary schools in Bengal. Parna Sengupta examines the period from 1850 to the 1930s and finds that modern education effectively reinforced the place of religion in colonial India. Debates over the mundane aspects of schooling, rather than debates between religious leaders, transformed the everyday definitions of what it meant to be a Christian, Hindu, or Muslim. Speaking to our own time, Sengupta concludes that today's Quran schools are not, as has been argued, throwbacks to a premodern era. She argues instead that Quran schools share a pedagogical frame with today's Christian and Muslim schools, a connection that plays out the long history of this colonial encounter.

"Ground breaking. . . . Seminal study."
