Lau Provides evidence that liberal religionists defer to conservative religionists in making explicit the religious foundations of their public policy positions, identifies the barriers to liberal religionists doing otherwise, and makes a strong case for why we should show up as religious people in the public square. Inspiring and a informative. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Rethinking the Public Role of the Religious Liberal By Vaughn Keller This is an insightful analysis of the timidity with which the liberal religious enter the world of public debate from a religious perspective. It is a point of view that needs to be heard. Rasor does more than provide an analysis, he describes how the engagement between the religious liberal community and the public marketplace might change. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. A good read in the time of Trump By Customer I read this for seminary, and didn't expect it to be as relevant to this day 2 weeks after Trump's inauguration as it is

In this clarion call to action, leading Unitarian Universalist theologian Paul Rasor dispels the myth that conservative Christianity is the only valid religious voice in the national debates on social policy. Showing that religious liberals are more numerous than many realize, he calls on them to embrace their prophetic heritage and bring their religious convictions to bear on the issues of our time. Reclaiming Prophetic Witness will lift your spirit, while inspiring you to lift your voice and reclaim a place in the public square. From the foreword: This is a time for prophets. In the United States, economic inequality-at its highest level since the Gilded Age-is tearing our communities apart, depriving young people of hope in the future. Across the world, the unsustainable use of fossil fuels has poisoned the soil and the air, turning African farms into desert and threatening island nations with destruction. Great liberation struggles of past generations remain incomplete. All too often, churches close their doors to queer families, schools close their doors to immigrant children, and hospitals close their doors to the most vulnerable. The earth and her people cry out in anguish, in indignation, and, yet still, in hope....
