"Plan B" indicates an alternative and unconventional view of the world, and this is the diary for those who swim against the tide. It's a weekly diary with street art, photographs, illustrations, and more all submitted by young artists and activists from around the world. The diary is designed for students and young people who want a diary that reflects aspects of counterculture, dissent, and protest. It presents a quirky and creative way to illustrate the injustice, success, ironies, humor, and tragedy of politics, love, and life in the world today. Includes international events and holidays, lists of campaigning organizations, and subway maps.

About the Author Stephanie Morison: Stephanie is a freelance graphic designer and illustrator. Her work is a balance between her commercial graphic design business and personal projects dedicated to process-driven, handmade art and craft Jason Outlaw: Jason is a commercial artist specializing in illustration, typography and printmaking. It is his background in graffiti and street art that has informed his ideas about visual communication, public space and the way people interact with the places they occupy.
